

VISIT TO THE GROUNDS FOR SCULPTURE TO VIEW BOAZ VAADIA'S "MUMMIES"

Docent - Led Tour:
Wednesday August 17th
(Rain date Thursday August 18th)

I have followed the career of Israeli artist/sculptor Boaz Vaadia ever since I saw his first "mummy" (at least that's what I call them; I have no idea what he would think of my characterization). It has come to my attention that over 100 of his original works will be on display in the Princeton, New Jersey area at an outdoor exhibition site called Grounds for Sculpture. If you are interested in attending please email me: Rabbi@geshershalom.org

I hope you will join me on this interesting tour!

All stages of the artist's work since the 1970s appears in this extensive exhibition, which includes over 125 of his pieces installed in two major buildings. Seven of his bronze sculptures are on view outdoors in the beautiful gardened landscape of Grounds For Sculpture. The exhibition includes many of the artist's earliest works as well as large as well as his large bluestone sculptures and bronzes Vaadia casts from them. On view along with the large bronze and stone sculptures are intimate groupings of his smaller works made of multiple strata of roofing slate mounted atop wooden pedestals Vaadia made out of huge beams he found.
